

Sessions Approach Gambling Log

Name _____

Date	Location (including address)	Others Present	W2-G Winings	Machine # Ticket # Table #	Starting Cash (Keep ATM receipt)	Ending Cash (get receipt)	Net from the Session	Notes: (type of gambling activity)

An IRS chief counsel advice memorandum from 2008 suggests that casual gamblers keep a log of gambling by session. This memorandum was reinforced by a more recent court case Shollenberger vs Commissioner. Keeping records with a session log will in many cases result in less income subject to tax.

A session is the time between buying in and cashing out. It would most commonly last a day unless the gambler changes location or gambling activity.

Keep funds for food and entertainment separate from gambling cash.

Recordkeeping for Casual Gamblers

Casino gamblers are rewarded with Forms W-2G to report winnings of $1,200 or more for Bingo or slot machines and $1,500 for Keno. The winnings from the W-2G are reported to the IRS to be taxed as miscellaneous income. Losses from gambling are deductible as itemized deductions only to the extent of the gambling income. Total winnings and losses for the year can not be netted.

The sessions approach to recordkeeping

An IRS chief counsel advice memorandum from 2008 suggests that casual gamblers keep a log of gambling by session. This memorandum was reinforced by a more recent court case Shollenberger vs Commissioner.

A session is the time between buying in and cashing out. It would most commonly last a day unless the gambler changes location or gambling activity.

The IRS lists the following items as essential for recordkeeping for a casual gambler:

- Date of the wagering
- Name and address of the gambling establishment
- Names of others present
- Amounts won or lost

Keeping records by session would satisfy the above IRS requirements if a log as shown in the example below was kept. Keep funds for food and entertainment separate from gambling cash.

Date	Location	Others Present	W-2G Winnings	Machine, Table #	Starting Cash	Ending Cash	Net from the
01/01/14	Local casino,	Mom	$2,000	100000	$100	$500	$400
04/01/14	same	Mom	0		$100	0	(100)
08/01/14	same	Mom	0		$100	$400	$300

By keeping records this way, the sessions with income would be added and taxed, and the sessions with a net loss would be recorded as an itemized deduction. The income to be included on the tax return would be $700, not $2,000 as the W-2G states. Keeping records with a session log will in many cases result in less income subject to tax. Relying on Player's Club card statements can be accurate documentation only if all gambling activity is included and no one else uses the card.

Conclusion: Casual gamblers should keep track of gambling with a log by session for the best and most accurate tax result.
